Description

Oestradiol is the main antagonist of progesterone and testosterone

The principal representative of the oestrogens (oestrone [E1], oestradiol [E2] and oestriol [E3]) is the biologically active (most potent) oestradiol. Oestradiol is produced in the ovaries, the placenta, the adrenal cortices and the testes or by conversion from androgen precursors (testosterone). Oestradiol is responsible for the development of secondary sexual characteristics (breast development, fat distribution) and reproductive function. In women, oestradiol also builds up tissue and influences the female body silhouette. Oestradiol falls significantly in women after the menopause, which can trigger numerous complaints.

Effects (excerpt):

• Promotes proliferation of the endometrium

• Stimulates breast growth

• Increases body fat

• Reduces utilisation of thyroid hormones

• Slightly restricts osteoclast function

• Increases blood clotting

• when dominant: Reduces libido

• Worsens blood sugar levels

• Loss of zinc and accumulation of copper

• Reduces oxygen levels in all cells

• Increases the risk of uterine cancer

• Increases the risk of breast cancer

• Retains water and salts

• when dominant: Promotes depression and headaches

• Reduces vascular tone

reduced secretion:

• increased risk of osteoporosis • reduced fertility • reduced potency • loss of libido • erectile dysfunction • postmenopausal or andropausal complaints • sleep disturbances (-> reduction of the growth hormone IGF-1) • IGF-1 also improves the regeneration of the skin and mucous membranes, enhances physical performance and counteracts stress. • depressive mood • headaches • hot flushes • increased sweating • thinner and more wrinkled skin • loss of female contours (reduction in breast size, loss of waist-hip definition)

Oestrogen dominance: (marked excess of oestradiol)

• Acceleration of the ageing process • Infertility • Oedema, feeling of fullness, feeling of “bloating” • Allergies (bronchial asthma, eczema, rhinitis, sinusitis..) • Autoimmune disorders e.g. Hashimoto’s thyroiditis, systemic lupus erythematosus, multiple sclerosis (MS) • Gallbladder disease • Menometrorrhagia • Increased adipose tissue, especially on the abdomen, hips and thighs • Cold hands and feet due to thyroid dysfunction • Fatigue • Mastodynia / mastopathies • Cervical dysplasias (malformation of the uterine mucosa) • Depressive mood with inner restlessness and anxiety disorders, panic attacks • Altered blood coagulation with the risk of stroke, embolism, thromboses, myocardial infarction • Mood swings, irritability, concentration problems, mnestic disorders (memory loss, gaps in memory) • Insomnia (sleeplessness) • Fibroids and cysts (ovary, breast) • Alopecia (hair loss) • Headaches, migraine • Osteoporosis • Mammary carcinoma (breast cancer) • Cervical carcinoma (cervical cancer) • Endometrial carcinoma (uterine lining)
