Description

Laboratory chemical analysis to determine amino acid coverage

Amino acids are essential building blocks of proteins and protein substances. They are therefore partly responsible for vital functions in the body. Particularly important are 22 proteinogenic amino acids. Nine of them are referred to as essential because they cannot be produced by the body itself. Thirteen are considered non-essential, as they can be produced by the body, at least in part.
The wide range of functions of amino acids makes it sensible to ensure an optimal supply. The Amino-Screen blood test conveniently determines the current status of the most important amino acids from home.
The Amino-Screen blood test includes analysis of the following 22 amino acids, of which 9 are essential and 13 are non-essential:
